What is Diabetes?

Diabetes is a group of metabolic diseases characterized by a chronic disturbance in the blood glucose levels. In diabetes, the body does not produce enough insulin or the insulin it produces does not work properly. Insulin helps the body use glucose for energy and to store extra glucose for later use.

Types of Diabetes

There are three main types of diabetes: Type 1, Type 2, and Gestational Diabetes. Type 1 is an autoimmune disease where the body's immune system attacks the insulin-producing cells in the pancreas. Type 2 is the most common type, often linked to obesity and genetics. Gestational diabetes occurs during pregnancy.

What is Insulin?

Insulin is a hormone produced by the pancreas that helps cells take up glucose. It acts as a key to unlock the cells so that glucose can enter and be used for energy. Without insulin, glucose cannot enter the cells, leading to high blood sugar levels.

The liver takes up glucose, converts it into glycogen and stores it.

Glucose signals the liver to convert glycogen to glucose and release the glucose into the blood.

The conversion of glycogen into glucose is called gluconeogenesis and takes up both in protein and glycogen.

Type 1 Diabetes: In this condition, the body does not produce enough insulin. This is an autoimmune disease where the immune system attacks the insulin-producing cells in the pancreas. It is often diagnosed in children and young adults.

Type 2 Diabetes: This is the most common type of diabetes. It is often linked to obesity and genetics. In this condition, the body does not use insulin properly. It is often diagnosed in middle-aged and older adults.

What is Glucose?

Glucose is a type of sugar and is the body's main source of energy. It is produced by the liver and is used by the body for energy. It is also stored in the liver and muscles for later use.

Glucose Metabolism

Glucose is used by the body for energy. It is converted into energy through a process called glycolysis. The energy is then used by the body for various functions. Glucose is also stored in the liver and muscles for later use.

Cells use glucose as fuel

Muscle take-up glucose, either using it as fuel or storing it as glycogen

Glucose is converted to triglycerides and stored in fat (adipose tissue)
