A. Henty,2022-12-04 Reproduction of the original With Lee in Virginia Henty,1909 With Lee in Virginia G. A. Henty,2010-08-28 PREFACE My Dear Lads The Great War between the Northern and Southern States of America possesses a peculiar interest for us not only because it was a struggle between two sections of a people akin to us in race and language but because of the heroic courage with which the weaker party with ill fed ill clad ill equipped regiments for four years sustained the contest with an adversary not only possessed of immense numerical superiority but having the command of the sea and being able to draw its arms and munitions of war from all the manufactories of Europe Authorities still differ as to the rights of the case The Confederates firmly believed that the States having voluntarily united retained the right of withdrawing from the Union when they considered it for their advantage to do so The Northerners took the opposite point of view and an appeal to arms became inevitable During the first two years of the war the struggle was conducted without inflicting unnecessary hardship upon the general population But later on the character of the war changed and the Federal armies carried wide spread destruction wherever they marched Upon the other hand the moment the struggle was over the conduct of the conquerors was marked by a clemency and generosity altogether unexampled in history a complete amnesty being granted and none whether soldiers or civilians being made to suffer for their share in the rebellion With Lee in Virginia G. A. Henty,2013-07-17 I won t have it Pearson so it s no use your talking If I had my way you shouldn t touch any of the field hands And when I get my way that won t be so very long I will take very good care you shan t But you shan t hit Dan He is not one of the regular house hands was the reply and I shall appeal to Mrs Wingfield as to whether I am to be interfered with in the discharge of my duties You may appeal to my mother if you like but I don t think that you will get much by it You are too fond of that whip Pearson It never was heard on the estate during my father s time and it shan t be again when it comes to be mine I can tell you Come along Dan I want you at the stables Vincent Wingfield turned on his heel and followed by Dan a negro lad of some eighteen years old he walked toward the house leaving Jonas Pearson the overseer of the Orangery Estate looking after him with an evil expression of face Vincent Wingfield was the son of an English officer who making a tour in the States had fallen in love with and won the hand of Winifred Cornish a Virginia heiress and one of the belles of Richmond After the marriage he had taken her to visit his family in England but she had not been there many weeks before the news arrived of the sudden death of her father A month later she and her husband returned to Virginia as her presence was required there in reference to business matters connected with the estate of which she was now the mistress The Orangery so called from a large conservatory built by Mrs Wingfield s grandfather was the family seat and the broad lands around it were tilled by upward of two hundred slaves There were in addition three other properties lying in different parts of the State Here Vincent with two sisters one older and one younger than himself had been born When he was eight years old Major and Mrs Wingfield had gone over with their children to England and had left Vincent there for four years at school his holidays being spent at the house of his father s brother a country gentleman in Sussex Then he had been sent for unexpectedly his father saying that his health was not good and that he should like his son to be with him A year later his father died With Lee in Virginia G.
