Sampling Theory and Practice Changbao Wu, Mary E. Thompson, 2020-05-15 The three parts of this book on survey methodology combine an introduction to basic sampling theory engaging presentation of topics that reflect current research trends and informed discussion of the problems commonly encountered in survey practice These related aspects of survey methodology rarely appear together under a single connected roof making this book a unique combination of materials for teaching research and practice in survey sampling Basic knowledge of probability theory and statistical inference is assumed but no prior exposure to survey sampling is required The first part focuses on the design based approach to finite population sampling It contains a rigorous coverage of basic sampling designs related estimation theory model based prediction approach and model assisted estimation methods The second part stems from original research conducted by the authors as well as important methodological advances in the field during the past three decades Topics include calibration weighting methods regression analysis and survey weighted estimating equation EE theory longitudinal surveys and generalized estimating equations GEE analysis variance estimation and resampling techniques empirical likelihood methods for complex surveys handling missing data and non response and Bayesian inference for survey data The third part provides guidance and tools on practical aspects of large scale surveys such as training and quality control frame construction choices of survey designs strategies for reducing non response and weight calculation These procedures are illustrated through real world surveys Several specialized topics are also discussed in detail including household surveys telephone and web surveys natural resource inventory surveys adaptive and network surveys dual frame and multiple frame surveys and analysis of non probability survey samples This book is a self contained introduction to survey sampling that provides a strong theoretical base with coverage of current research trends and pragmatic guidance and tools for conducting surveys

Sample Survey Theory Paul Kottnerus, 2003 This book describes a novel approach to the theory of sampling from finite populations The new unifying approach is based on the sampling autocorrelation coefficient Step by step the author derives a general set of sampling equations that describe the estimators their variances as well as the corresponding variance estimators These equations are applicable for a whole family of different sampling designs varying from simple surveys to complex surveys based on multistage sampling without replacement and unequal probabilities This volume will be useful for survey practitioners faced with complex surveys The book also considers constrained estimation problems that may occur in practice when linear or nonlinear economic restrictions are imposed on the population parameters to be estimated and the observations stem from different surveys For example regression estimators and consistent estimation of contingency tables are special cases within this rather broad class of constrained estimators This volume also offers a guide to little known connections between design based survey sampling and other areas of statistics and related disciplines The common underlying principles in the distinct fields are explained by an extensive use of the geometry of the ancient Pythagorean theorem Apart from its applied importance the book may also serve as a textbook in advanced courses and as a reference for researchers in statistics and empirical economics In order to make the text as self contained as possible the treatise includes one chapter with the main results from statistics including regression analysis Some familiarity with calculus and matrix algebra is a sufficient prerequisite Paul Kottnerus received his PhD in economics in 1989 from the University of Amsterdam In 1995 he joined Statistics Netherlands Department of Methods and Informatics Previously he spent several years with Dutch Telecom He is author of the book Linear Models with Correlated Disturbances 1991

Sample Survey Theory Paul Kottnerus, 2012-11-12 This volume deals primarily with the classical question of how to draw conclusions about the population mean of a variable given a sample with observations on that variable Another classical question is how to use prior knowledge of an economic or definitional relationship between the population means of several variables provided that the variables are observed in a sample The present volume is a compilation of two discussion papers and some additional notes on these two basic questions The discussion papers and notes were prepared for a 15 hour course at Statistics Netherlands in Voorburg in February 2000 The first discussion paper is entitled A Memoir on Sampling and Rho the Generalized Intrasample Correlation Coefficient 1999 It describes a new approach to the problem of unequal probability sampling The second discussion paper The General Restriction Estimator 2000 deals with the problem of how to find constrained estimators that obey a given set of restrictions imposed on the parameters to be estimated Parts I and II of the volume provide a novel and systematic treatment of sampling theory considered from the angle of the sampling autocorrelation coefficient ρ The same concept plays an important role in the analysis of time series Although this concept is also well known in sampling theory for instance in cluster sampling and systematic sampling generalizations of ρ for an arbitrary sampling design are to my knowledge not readily found in the literature

Theory of Sample Surveys M. Thompson, 1997-08-01 Following the chronological development of sample surveys this book provides an analysis of the mathematical and statistical theory of the subject The text begins with the mathematics of randomized sampling designs as well as a general treatment of estimation of population totals through the Horvitz Thompson estimator and its variants The book then examines approximations and limit theorems for the distribution of the estimators and design based estimation of other population quantities It concludes with chapters concerning inference from surveys Theory of Sample Surveys will assist in a range of applications including auditing quality monitoring market research wildlife surveys mining exploration agriculture and business surveys population health studies This book acts as an exceptional resource for survey methodologists in government organizations as well as lecturers and graduate students in statistics and biostatistics

A Treatise on

Surveying, Comprising the Theory and the Practice William Mitchell Gillespie, 1897 Survey Sampling and Measurement N. Krishnan Namboodiri, 2013-09-03 Survey Sampling and Measurement contains the invited papers presented at the Second Symposium on Survey Sampling held at Chapel Hill in April 1977 The volume is divided into seven parts Part I makes a plea towards improving the quality of sample surveys via the creation of a computerized system of information on error estimates associated with the design and execution of surveys It also suggests a realistic agenda for future work in survey sampling practice and theory Part II contains papers dealing with specific methodological problems Part III examines selected problems of analysis of survey data The papers in Part IV deal with nonresponse undercoverage and related problems Part V focuses on time series analysis Part VI discusses applications of sample survey data and methods Part VII addresses the gap between current survey practices and recent theoretical developments It is hoped that this volume will be of interest to survey statisticians as well as to survey data users If it stimulates thoughtful and courageous attack on some of the unresolved problems in survey sampling its mission will have been amply fulfilled The Theory and Practice of Working Plans (forest Organization) Arthur Bernhard Recknagel, 1913
