The Visible and the Invisible in the Interplay between Philosophy, Literature and Reality Anna-Teresa Tymieniecka, 2002-03-31 Merleau Ponty's categories of the visible and the invisible are investigated afresh and with originality in this penetrating collection of literary and philosophical inquiries Going beyond the traditional and current references to the mental and the sensory mind and body perceptual content and the abstract ideas conveyed in language etc these studies range from the hidden spheres of reality to the play of the visible and the invisible left as traces in works of human genius the origins of intellect and language the real and the imaginary in literature and the hidden realities in the philosophy of the everyday world These literary and philosophical probings collectively reveal the role of this disjoined conjoined pairing in the ontopoietic establishment of reality that is in the manifestation of the logos of life In tandem they bring to light the hidden play of the visible and the invisible in the emergence of our vital societal intimate intellectual and creative involvements Cultural Directions for the Rose John Cranston, 1875 The Cultivator , 1848 The Yew Tree Hal Hartzell, 1991 The English Guernsey Cattle Society's Herd Book English Guernsey Cattle Society, 1929

The Poetry of Life in Literature Anna-Teresa Tymieniecka, 2013-03-09 Poetry of life in literature and through literature and the vast territory in between as vast as human life itself where they interact and influence each other is the nerve of human existence Whether we are aware of it or not we are profoundly dissatisfied with the stark reality of life's swift progress onward and the enigmatic and irretrievable meaning of the past And so we dramatise our existence probing deeply for a lyrical and heartfelt yet universally valid sense of our experience It is in great works of literature that we seek those hidden springs that so move us It is in honour of this search that this collection focuses on the creative imagination at work in literature and aesthetics T. S. Eliot Marion Montgomery, 2008-09-01 This brilliantly allusive and gracefully written study is focused on T S Eliot s developing commitment to Christianity but the essay is by no means procrustean or reductive in its strategies nor is it theological Montgomery shows how Eliot s intellectual and emotional uneasiness in the early poems is reflected in such technical devices as point of view and imagery The questions of the poem s voice and the poet s mask which are often ironic in nature become less pressing as time goes on and finally Eliot comes to a dynamic stillness a frozen point in the sea of change that is variously called nature history and society This stillness embodies the poet s rendering of Christian incarnation the Word within the word The author finds too that Eliot s imagery grows richer during the progress of his spiritual journey As the imagery becomes more religious it also grows more complex and more concrete Eliot in the end decides the poet s personal struggle to know his world is more important than the poetry which does not matter as he says in East Coker Paradoxically the poetry of T S Eliot takes on an increasingly classical quality as it steadily becomes more personal and Christian Montgomery accordingly shows how Eliot ultimately arrives where he started and sees the place for the first time The Horticulturist, and Journal of Rural Art and Rural Taste ,1847 The Humanitarian.
