Tomorrows Child:

Tomorrow's Child Sandra H. Ritter, 2002 Centering Hope as a Sustainable Decolonial Practice Yara González-Justiniano, 2022-09-23 Where is the hope What does it look like Is the Christian church providing a hope that materializes in the grounding of people s thriving These questions posed the catalysts of this work where the author sets up a journey that parses the definition of hope within Christian theology as an ontological category of the human experience Through ethnographic research and ecclesial study of diverse congregations in Puerto Rico the work moves from an articulation of context hope practice and future to reveal its aim of liberation through a hope that can be sustainable in time and space She analyzes the operations of political systems that suppress hope in the island Weaving the theme of a theology of hope with the fields of ecclesiology memory studies postcolonial and decolonial theory liberation theology and the study of social movements she builds a model that puts hope at the center of socio economic practices and moves toward a recipe for a hope that is sustainable in practice An Unpromising Hope Thomas R. Gaulke, 2021-09-21 Written in a theopoetic key this book challenges Christian reliance on the motif of promise especially where promise is regarded as a prerequisite for the experience of hope It pursues instead an unpromising hope available to the agnostic or belief fluid members and leaders of faith communities The book rejects any theological judgement about doubt and hopelessness being sinful It also rejects any hope which is grounded in a sense of Christian supremacy Chapter 1 focuses on Ernst Bloch s antifascist concept of utopian surplus putting Bloch in conversation with queer theorist Jose Esteban Munoz and womanist theologian M Shawn Copeland Chapter 2 explores the saudadic and theopoetic hope of Rubem Alves Chapter 3 turns to the womanist theologies of Delores Williams Emilie Townes and A Elaine Brown Crawford Finally chapter 4 engages the post colonial eschatology of Vitor Westhelle framing hope as nearby in space rather than nearby in time Each chapter offers an unpromising hope that may be tapped into by those who wish to affirm belief fluidity in their own communities and by those who wish to speak of hope honestly whether or not at any given moment they believe in God or in the promises of a god TOMORROW'S CHILD Rubem A. Alves, 1972 Trading Futures Filipe Maia, 2022-09-06 The discourse of financialized capitalism tries to create a future predictable enough to manage risk for the wealthy to shape the future into a profit making site that constrains and privatizes the sense of what s possible Here people s hopes and meaning making energies are policed through the burden of debt In Trading Futures Filipe Maia offers a theological reflection on hope and the future calling for escape routes from the debt economy Drawing on Marxism continental philosophy and Latin American liberation theology Maia provides a critical portrayal of financialization as a death dealing mechanism that colonizes the future in its own image Maia elaborates a Christian eschatology of liberation that offers a subversive mode of imagining future possibilities He shows how the Christian vocabulary of hope can offer a way to critique the hegemony of financialized capitalism propelling us in the direction of a just future that financial discourse cannot manage or control National Prevention Showcase and Forum , 1985 The Solace

Experiments in Immersive, One-to-One Performance Natalia Esling, 2024-08-01 This book investigates audience experience through the lens of sensory engagement in immersive one-to-one performance. It presents a distinct practice-based research (PBR) framework, a performance research laboratory designed to evaluate the effects on diverse audience experiences of two sense-specific manipulations: eye masks and touch. Through a qualitative analysis of responses from seventy-four individual audience participants, this book offers insight into how these popular immersing strategies might be experienced. What do these strategies achieve? How do audience participants make sense of them? Do audience responses align with artistic intentions? And how does the PBR framework designed to address these questions influence the outcomes? Through an analysis of three sets of one-to-one performance experiments generating comparative data about the experience of sense-specific manipulation, this book proposes the utility of merging methodologies in artistic research with empirical audience research in theatre and performance studies. This study offers a new perspective on the value of sensory-focused immersive one-to-one experience as a means of resensitizing audience participants through performance. Mid-Course Correction Revisited Ray Anderson, John A. Lanier, 2019-05-13 The original Mid Course Correction published over 20 years ago became a classic in the sustainability field. It put forth a new vision for what its author, Ray C. Anderson, called the prototypical company of the 21st century: a restorative company that does no harm to society or the environment. In Mid Course Correction, Anderson recounts his eureka moment as founder and leader of Interface Inc., one of the world's largest carpet and flooring companies and one that was doing business in all the usual ways. Bit by bit, he began learning how much environmental destruction companies like his had caused, prompting him to make a radical change. Mid Course Correction not only outlined what eco-centered leadership looks like; it also mapped out a specific set of goals for Anderson's company to eliminate its environmental footprint. Those goals remain visionary even today, and this second edition delves into how Interface worked toward making them a reality, birthing one of the most innovative and successful corporate sustainability efforts in the world. The new edition also explores why we need to create not only prototypical companies but also the prototypical economy of the twenty-first century. As our global economy shifts toward sustainability challenges like building the circular economy and reversing global warming, present tremendous opportunities for business and industry. Mid Course Correction Revisited contains a new foreword by Paul Hawken, several new chapters by Ray C. Anderson, Foundation executive director John A. Lanier, and interviews with Janine Benyus, Joel Makower, Andrew Winston, Ellen MacArthur, and other leaders.

in green enterprise the circular economy and biomimicry A wide range of business readers from sustainability professionals to green entrepreneurs to CEOs will find both wise advice and concrete examples in this new look at a master in corporate and environmental leadership and the legacy he left Your Child Today and Tomorrow Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg,1928

Alves,2011-05-01 All theories of social change says Alves rest squarely on the economic and structural forces operative in society at any given moment in history Thus many of the proposals offered by today s futurologists fall considerably short of social revolution They are in effect extrapolations from the functional matrix of our society Like the dinosaurs who disappeared not because they were too weak but because they were too strong our civilization is motivated less by the desire for internal growth and existential relevance than it is by blind outward expansion We are determined by a triangle of interlocking systems each deriving and giving life to the others the power of the sword the power of money and the power of science In this context to be a realist is to accept the rules of the game laid down by the power lords of our rational society whose goals are war production and consumption But the utopian mentality argues Alves wants to create a qualitatively new order in which economy must abandon the goal of infinite growth The only way out then is to abort realism from the body politic and impregnate it with the power of the imagination This book clears away the debris of realism and lays the groundwork for a constructive theory of creative imagination moving us toward new forms of social organization where the community of faith can be found
