

- Sociology: the scientific and systematic study of groups and group interactions, societies, and social interactions, from small and personal groups to very large groups.
- sociology and other social sciences
- goals of sociology: Cultural patterns, social forces, and influences put pressure on people to select one choice over another. Sociologists try to identify these general patterns by examining the behavior of large groups of people living in the same society and experiencing the same societal pressures.
- social forces:
- macro and micro: macro-level analysis looks at trends among and between large groups and societies. a macro-level analysis might research the ways that language use has changed over time or in social media outlets. micro-level study small groups and individual interactions. a micro-level study might look at the accepted rules of conversation in various groups such as among teenagers or business professionals.
- Parson's "society as a social system"
- the sociological imagination: pioneer sociologist C. Wright Mills described as an awareness of the relationship between a person's behavior and experience and the wider culture that shaped the person's choices and perceptions. It's a way of seeing our own and other people's behavior in relationship to history and social structure (1959).
- social institutions: patterns of beliefs and behaviors focused on meeting social needs, such as government, education, family, healthcare, religion, and the economy.
- three main sociological theories/perspectives (structural-functionalism, conflict theory, and symbolic interactionism): Functionalism, also called structural-functional theory, sees society as a structure with interrelated parts designed to meet the biological and social needs of the individuals in that society. Functionalism grew out of the writings of English philosopher and biologist, Herbert Spencer, who saw similarities between society and the human body. conflict theory- a theory that looks at society as a competition for limited resources. symbolic interactionism-a theoretical perspective through which scholars examine the relationship of individuals within their society by studying their communication (language and symbols)
- manifest and latent functions: Manifest functions are the consequences of a social process that are sought or anticipated, while latent functions are the unsought consequences of a social process. A manifest function of college education, for example, includes gaining knowledge, preparing for a career, and finding a good job that utilizes that education. Latent functions of your
