

The Concept of Affect Logic: An Integrative Psycho-Socio-Biological Approach to Understanding and Treatment of Schizophrenia

Luc Ciompi

IN THIS ARTICLE, the psycho-socio-biologically integrative concept of affect-logic, and its relevance for a comprehensive understanding and therapy of schizophrenia, is briefly presented. This concept has been developed by the author over the past 20 years, on the basis of the literature, of clinical experience and his own research into long-term evolution, rehabilitation, effects of milieu-therapy, and nonlinear evolutionary dynamics of the illness. It postulates, basically, that fundamental affective states (or emotions, feelings, moods) are continuously and inseparably linked to all cognitive functioning (or "thinking" and "logic" in a broad sense), and that affects have essential organizing and integrating effects on cognition. Schizophrenia is understood as an altered mode of affective-cognitive interaction based, possibly, on disturbed (loosened) affective-cognitive connections. This hypothesis leads to: 1) an integrative psycho-socio-biological model of long-term evolution of the illness; 2) a new understanding of psychopathological core phenomena such as ambivalence, incoherence, and emotional flattening; 3) an innovative therapeutic approach based on an emotion-relaxing milieu and style of care; and 4) the hypothesis that schizophrenia could basically be an affective (and not a cognitive) disease, of another kind than mania or melancholia, however.

Since the classical descriptions by Kraepelin (1896) and Bleuler (1911) of the psychotic condition we now call schizophrenia, this enigmatic disorder continues to represent one of the most puzzling unsolved problems in the whole field of medicine. Even though many biological, social, and psychological factors which influence its etiology and course have been detected during the last decades – among them genetic, perinatal, and biochemical factors, disturbed rearing conditions and confusing familial communication patterns, high expressed emotions, socio-economic and cultural conditions (references see below) – no predominant single "cause" of the multitude of psychotic phenomena has so far been identified, nor has an adequate theoretical framework emerged which would convincingly link

The Logic Of Affect

Hans Kristian Strandstuen Rustad

The Logic Of Affect:

The Logic of Affect Paul Redding, 1999 Most attempts to trace the roots of current scientific approaches to the mind have ignored the contributions of post Kantian German idealism Paul Redding here shows the relevance of this philosophical tradition to an understanding of the mind and its embodiment as well as the relation of feeling to cognition Redding observes how Fichte Schelling and Hegel struggled with the problem of reconciling Kant's normative approach to experience and thought with the naturalistic stance of the emerging medical sciences A century later William James Freud and Jung also addressed the interconnection of thought and feeling reaching views similar to those of the post Kantian idealists In particular Redding argues the idealists conceived of a logic of affect that reemerged in Freud's concept of the primary process and in modern evolutionary ideas of subcortical processing This innovative book demonstrates how new insights can be brought to the study of mentality and consciousness by considering previously overlooked interpretations Redding shows that these early theorists of the unconscious can bring scholars to a better appreciation not only of classical thinkers like James and Freud but also of contemporary debates about the mind and emotions
