Spectator Bird:

The Spectator Bird Wallace Stegner, 2017-03-21 This tour de force of American literature and a winner of the National Book Award is a profound intimate affecting novel from one of the most esteemed literary minds of the last century and a beloved chronicler of the West Joe Allston is a cantankerous retired literary agent who is in his own words just killing time until time gets around to killing me His parents and his only son are long dead leaving him with neither ancestors nor descendants tradition nor ties His job trafficking the talent of others has not been his choice He has passed through life as a spectator before retreating to the woods of California in the 1970s with only his wife Ruth by his side When an unexpected postcard from a long lost friend arrives Allston returns to the journals of a trip he has taken years before a journey to his mother's birth place where he once sought a link with his past Uncovering this history floods Allston with memories both grotesque and poignant and finally vindicates him of his past and lays bare that Joe Allston has never been quite spectator enough

A Literary History of the American West Western Literature Association (U.S.), 1987 Literary histories of course do not have a reason for being unless there exists the literature itself This volume perhaps more than others of its kind is an expression of appreciation for the talented and dedicated literary artists who ignored the odds avoided temptations to write for popularity or prestige and chose to write honestly about the American West believing that experiences long known to be of historical importance are also experiences that need and deserve a literature of importance
