Translated Accounts James Kelman, 2002-12-03 In Translated Accounts the Booker Prize winning author of How late it was how late offers us a harrowing glimpse into a realm where power is unchecked and liberties are few or nonexistent Taking us into an unnamed territory that appears to be under military rule Kelman creates a world that many know or have known a world that may one day be thrust upon us conjuring a grim awareness of the instability that lurks behind the veneer of order in any country Filtering the dark visions of Franz Kafka through the verbal brilliance of Samuel Beckett Kelman has written a novel that is often shocking yet surprisingly poignant and totally unforgettable

Bad English Rachael Gilmour, 2020-07-28 Bad English investigates the impact of increasing language diversity precipitated by migration globalisation and new forms of communication in transforming contemporary literature in Britain Considering writers whose work engages experimentally playfully and ambivalently with English's power while exploring what it means to move between forms of language it makes the case for literature as the pre eminent medium to probe the terms of linguistic belonging and for a diverse and growing field of writing in Britain defined by its inside outside relationship to English in its institutionalised forms Bad English offers innovative readings of writers including James Kelman Tom Leonard Suhayl Saadi Raman Mundair Daljit Nagra Xiaolu Guo Leila Aboulela Brian Chikwava and Caroline Bergvall Drawing on insights from applied linguistics and translation studies as well as literary scholarship it will appeal to students and academics across these disciplines
