Robin DiMatteo, 2014 This edited volume brings together top notch scientists and practitioners to illustrate intersections between health communication behavior change and treatment adherence The Factors and Behaviors Associated with Legislator Use of Communication Technology Joe West, Jingjing Gao, Sojin Jang, 2021-08-23 Few will doubt the importance of the role that communication technology played in American politics in 2020 The Factors and Behaviors Associated with Legislator Use of Communication Technology examines the various factors and behaviors associated with legislator use of communication technology Offering both macro and micro level perspectives as well as quantitative and qualitative data analyses a broad perspective of the role that communication technology plays in driving legislator behavior is provided Building a theoretical structure this book begins with an examination of how communication technology can destabilize the policymaking process and offers an overview of media and policy process theories and legislator roles and the association of these roles with the use of communication technology Moving to the micro level the authors present quantitative and qualitative evidence associated with legislator behaviors associated with the use of communication technology including compromise behaviors and political ideological polarization closing with an examination of the use of communication technology by legislators during the 2020 COVID 19 pandemic The Impact of Innovative Technology on Students' Communication Behavior and Perceptions of Teacher Immediacy Aimee Diane Sapp, 2002 Computer mediated communication is an increasingly popular method for attempting to engage students This dissertation explores several areas of connection between technology and communication apprehension and perceptions of teacher immediacy Students who utilized electronic communication options email electronic discussion groups etc had higher GPAs than those who did not but interestingly students who communicated with a professor after class and in office hours had no significant difference in academic performance Teacher immediacy was also looked at with reference to the student s use of electronic communication options No relationship was found between student perception of teacher immediacy and their use of alternate forms of communication There is also evidence that students utilize whatever form of communication is available to them Students who spoke also used computer mediated options and those who did not communicate where equally disinterested in both forms This finding held true for apprehensive communicators as well Those students did not use the alternative formats of communication any more than they did the traditional The only difference discovered was that apprehensive students computer mediated communication behaviors model those of their traditional communication patterns They participate in a passive way only They listen in class and they read computer postings They will ask a question in private office hours or after class if necessary and they will send a private email to the instructor These students do not utilize communications that require a public medium When analysis was performed on the content of the messages it was found that when students spoke in class the comments were more likely to be about class content while verbal comments outside of class were about class processes but not necessarily content Electronic messages seemed to be most like the comments made in the classroom setting and were primarily substantive in nature
