Hoekman, 2004 Hoekman Maskus and Saggi analyze national and international policy options to encourage the international transfer of technology distinguishing between four major channels of such transfer trade in products trade in knowledge foreign direct investment and intra national and international movement of people They develop a typology of country types and appropriate policy rules of thumb as a guide to both national policymakers and rule making in the World Trade Organization as policies should differentiate between countries The authors also develop some rules of thumb for policy intervention These include Liberal trade policies for all types of countries Temporary encouragement of foreign direct investment inflows for low income countries Licensing for technical transformation and adaptive investments by local firms to apply technologies Policy options for source economies to encourage international transfer of technology to poor countries including fiscal incentives improvement of flows of public domain technologies with appropriate subsidies and price differentiation for exports of intellectual property products This paper a product of the Trade Team Development Research Group is part of a larger effort in the group to analyze issues related to the design of special and differential treatment of developing countries in the WTO

Technology Transfer and Innovation for Low-Carbon Development Miria Pigato, Simon Black, Damien Dussaux, Zhimin Mao, Ryan Rafaty, Simon Touboul, 2020-04-09 Technological revolutions have increased the world's wealth unevenly and in ways that have accelerated climate change This report argues that achieving The Paris Agreement's objectives would require a massive transfer of existing and commercially proven low carbon technologies LCT from high income to developing countries where the bulk of future emissions is expected to occur This mass deployment is not only a necessity but also an opportunity Policies to deploy LCT can help countries achieve economic and other development objectives like improving human health in addition to reducing greenhouse gases GHGs Additionally LCT deployment offers an opportunity for countries with sufficient capabilities to benefit from participation in global value chains and produce and export LCTs Finally the report calls for a greater international involvement in supporting the poorest countries which have the least access to LCT and finance and the most underdeveloped physical technological and institutional capabilities that are essential to benefit from technology

Regulation of Technology Transfer to Developing Countries Kevin E. Davis, 2014 This article revisits the debate over appropriate approaches to the regulation of technology transfer to developing countries It begins by contrasting two stylized approaches labeled for convenience the New International Economic Order model and the Globalization model which have historically struggled for acceptance It then explores the implications for the choice between these or alternative models of the fact that many developing countries presently lack the institutional capacity required to provide optimal regulation of technology transfer Existing discussions appear either to assume that developing countries possess sufficient institutional capacity to design and implement sophisticated regulatory regimes or to take the opposite approach and assume a drastic shortage of institutional capacity Both approaches ignore the intermediate category of countries that do face constraints upon institutional capacity but are striving to overcome them The analysis here is intended to demonstrate the general point that a country's present and future institutional capacity ought to be considered highly relevant to the design of central aspects of the regime that it uses to regulate technology transfer The analysis is also designed to highlight the specific need for attention to the distinctive questions of regulatory design which arise in countries that are in the process of enhancing their institutional capacity in this and other regulatory contexts

Technology Transfer to Developing Countries Thomas J. Allen, 2015-08-05 Excerpt from Technology Transfer to Developing Countries The International Technological Gatekeeper A questionnaire was developed and administered to the research personnel of An Foras Taluntais the Irish agricultural research and development organization to study the operation of communications channels for the international transfer of technological information The techniques employed are consistent with those used in previous studies of the purely domestic flow of technological information into American research and development laboratories Results of the study show that the international transfer like domestic transfer takes place in a two step process operating through certain intermediary agents called technological gatekeepers These technological gatekeepers must be well integrated into two information networks an external network of information sources and an internal network of users to whom the information can be delivered Possible strategies for gatekeeper development are discussed About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands

Strategic Planning in Technology
Transfer to Less Developed Countries Christian Madu, 1992-01-27 Despite an avalanche of literature over the last 30 years there has been relatively little written on the role played by strategic planning in the transfer of technology particularly from developed to less developed countries Technology transfer which involves the acquisition of inventive activity by secondary users is conceded vital to socio economic growth but usually it is looked at internationally from a micro perspective Unlike other books Madu s volume looks at technology transfer holistically It examines the advantages of technology transfer and its limitations by viewing recipient nations as systems in which social economic behavioral and political influences converge to help shape technological decisions Only when a systems perspective like this is adopted and technology seen as a strategic variable can technology transfer be understood and successfully implemented says Madu Madu thus identifies the failures of technology transfer as the result of malfunctions in three components of the system technology structure and behavior He analyzes these malfunctions offers ways to repair them and considers technology from the viewpoints of both transferrer and receiver whose missions goals and objectives are often not only disparate but sometimes in conflict He then offers what he calls prescriptive frameworks and guidelines to help implement transfer and to see it as a variable that must be integrated into national development planning Throughout Madu makes it clear that the objective of technology transfer is the maximizing of social welfare Using this overarching premise he is able to evaluate both the benefits and the social costs associated with technology transfer and to develop his prescriptive integrative models Intended for specialists in international finance and development and international business management Madu s book will be of special value to teachers of graduate courses in socio economic development public policy and economics and to policymakers throughout government
