Architectural Intelligence Molly Wright Steenson, 2022-11-01 Architects who engaged with cybernetics artificial intelligence and other technologies poured the foundation for digital interactivity In Architectural Intelligence Molly Wright Steenson explores the work of four architects in the 1960s and 1970s who incorporated elements of interactivity into their work Christopher Alexander Richard Saul Wurman Cedric Price and Nicholas Negroponte and the MIT Architecture Machine Group all incorporated technologies including cybernetics and artificial intelligence into their work and influenced digital design practices from the late 1980s to the present day Alexander long before his famous 1977 book A Pattern Language used computation and structure to visualize design problems Wurman popularized the notion of information architecture Price designed some of the first intelligent buildings and Negroponte experimented with the ways people experience artificial intelligence even at architectural scale Steenson investigates how these architects pushed the boundaries of architecture and how their technological experiments pushed the boundaries of technology What did computational cybernetic and artificial intelligence researchers have to gain by engaging with architects and architectural problems And what was this new space that emerged within these collaborations At times Steenson writes the architects in this book characterized themselves as anti architects and their work as anti architecture The projects Steenson examines mostly did not result in constructed buildings but rather in design processes and tools computer programs interfaces digital environments Alexander Wurman Price and Negroponte laid the foundation for many of our contemporary interactive practices from information architecture to interaction design from machine learning to smart cities

Think Like an Architect Hal Box, 2007-05-01 The design of cities and buildings affects the quality of our lives Making the built environment useful safe comfortable efficient and as beautiful as possible is a universal quest We dream about how we might live work and play From these dreams come some 95 percent of all private and public buildings professional architects design only about 5 percent of the built environment While much of what non architects build is beautiful and useful the ugliness and inconveniences that blight many urban areas demonstrate that an understanding of good architectural design is vital for creating livable buildings and public spaces To help promote this understanding among non architects as well as among those considering architecture as a profession award winning architect and professor Hal Box explains the process of making architecture from concept to completed building using real life examples to illustrate the principles involved in designing buildings that enhance the quality of life for those who live with them To cause what we build to become architecture we have three choices hire an architect become an architect or learn to think like an architect Box believes that everyone should be involved in making architecture and has organized this book as a series of letters to friends and students about the process of creating architecture He describes what architecture should be and do how to look at and appreciate good buildings and how to understand the design process work with an architect or become an architect He also provides an overview of architectural history with lists of books to read and buildings to see For those involved in building projects Box offers practical guidance about what goes into constructing a building from the first view of the site to the finished building For students thinking of becoming architects he describes an architect s typical training and career path And for the wide public audience interested in architecture and the built environment Box addresses how architecture relates to the city where the art of architecture is headed and why good architecture matters
